Summary:-

I found myself fortunate to get the opportunity to work on this project and work on a topic that has a comprehensive relevance. Macroeconomic movements that have impact over the life of the masses are significant one and to be carried out similar vigor.

Planning is the process that helps the developing countries to grow with more pace than otherwise. 'Inclusive Growth' was the central theme of Indian economic planning for 11th Five Year Plan and is also one of the most discussed topic world over by elite class.

The objectives set by The Government and The Planning Commission as well to set the layout for implementation comprised "Broad Base - Benefits" and "Equal Opportunity to all" as to main themes to work on and also laid some of the sector specific sub-themes to complete the picture of policy of well-planned development.

Looking at the implementation part of the said policy it can be deduced that after five year of working the picture on the ground is much away than what was envisioned. Any of the macroeconomic indicators is not speaking in the favor of the government. There are few arguable points in pros but they more appear to be outcome of some other events or had suffered from some other lacuna .

All the benchmarks that required attaining like:

- Reduces poverty
- Creates employment opportunities
- Access to essential services for the poor (Health & education)
- Equality of Opportunity, empowerment (through education and skill development)
- Employment opportunities (underpinned by the National Rural Employment Guarantee)

- Environmental Sustainability
- Recognition of Women's Agency
- Good Governance

All these factors are discussed in detail in the study and were found that Govt. did draft many policies and launched many programs allocated lot of budgets as well but the progress was actually not up to the mark.

Besides this, govt. alleged for corruption in many cases that arose more questions on its intentions of it with respect to national development.

The study emphasizes on the qualitative aspects of the subject of growth that is development and welfare. And carried on by taking all those elements which touched by planning commission for said topic as given above.

In the study I found that all the policies are always drafted initially on the lines of long term national planning but it lost its vigor in implementation part and especially in welfare aspect.
